

What is Anastrozole?

Anastrozole is used in men to prevent your body from making estrogen. Testosterone replacement therapy will naturally cause your body to make more estrogen. This medication is also used as a treatment in women to prevent their bodies from creating estrogen.

Treatment in Men

Anastrozole is used during testosterone replacement therapy to stop your body from producing estrogen, the female hormone. Elevated estrogen levels can affect your mood, energy level, enlarged breasts, and sexual function.

Side Effects of Treatment

It is possible for all medications to have side effects. If you are concerned about any side effects contact your provider. Common side effects include:

- Hot Flashes
- Joint Pain
- Headaches
- Feeling Tired

Anastrozole Treatment

Your provider will complete blood work, review your medical history, and work with you to create a customized treatment plan of medications, and lifestyle recommendations to make treatment as effective as possible.

How do I take this medication?

Your provider will prescribe a dose and number of times per week you need to take this medication based on your age, weight, and overall health. A pill is usually taken 24-36 hours after a testosterone injection.

When to seek medical attention?

Seek immediate medical attention if you experience any of the symptoms below while on treatment:

- Swelling of the Tongue
